a holistic view of human development that rejects the conventional stages of childhood adulthood and old age when we talk about human development we tend to characterize it as proceeding through a series of stages in which we are first children then adolescents and finally adults but as james bernard murphy observes growth is not limited to the young nor is decline limited to the aged we are never trapped within the horizon of a particular life stage children anticipate adulthood and adults recapture childhood according to murphy the very idea of stages of life undermines our ability to see our lives as a whole in your whole life murphy asks what accounts for the unity of a human life over time he advocates for an unconventional developmental story of human nature based on a nested hierarchy of three powers first each person's unique human genome insures biological identity over time second each person's powers of imagination and memory insure psychological identity over time and third each person's ability to tell his or her own life story insures narrative identity over time just as imagination and memory rely upon our biological identity so our autobiographical stories rest upon our psychological identity narrative is not the foundation of personal identity as many argue but its capstone engaging with the work of aristotle augustine jesus and rousseau as well as with the contributions of contemporary evolutionary biologists and psychologists murphy challenges the widely shared assumptions in western thinking about personhood and its development through discrete stages of childhood adulthood and old age he offers instead a holistic view in which we are always growing and declining always learning and forgetting and always living and dying and finds that only in relation to one's whole life does the passing of time obtain meaning between 1935 and 1959 the architecture of childhood was at the centre of architectural discourse in a way that is unique in architectural history some of the seminal projects of the period such as the secondary modern school at hunstanton by peter and alison smithson le corbusier s unité d habitation at marseilles or aldo van eyck s playgrounds and orphanage were designed for children at ciam architects utilized photographs of children to present their visions for reconstruction the unprecedented visibility of the child to architectural discourse during the period of reconstruction is the starting point for this interdisciplinary study of modern architecture under welfare state patronage focusing mainly on england this book examines a series of innovative buildings and environments developed for children such as the adventure playground the hertfordshire school the reformed children hospital brutalist housing estates and new towns it studies the methods employed by architects child experts and policy makers to survey assess and administer the physiological emotional and developmental needs of the user the child it identifies the new aesthetic and spatial order permeating the environments of childhood based on endowing children with the agency and autonomy to create a self regulating social order out of their own free will while rendering their interiority and sociability observable and governable by inserting the architectural object within a broader social and political context the architectures of childhood situates post war architecture within the welfare state s project of governing the self which most intensively targeted the citizen in the making the children yet the emphasis on the utilization of architecture as an instrument of power does not reduce it into a mere document of social policy as the author uncovers the surplus of meaning and richness of experience invested in these environments at the historical moment when children represented values and ideas about life community happiness human potentiality and perhaps even the very prospect of imagining a more humane and secure future at the aftermath of the second world war

what is a child the concept of childhood is so familiar that we tend to assume its universality however the meaning of childhood is always being negotiated not only by the imaginations of adults but also by nations markets history and children themselves yet as much as the question is considered by the social world the contributions in this book remind readers that children are also active embodied and inquiring agents engaged in figuring a relationship with that the world they inherit this book s unifying theme the child in question emerges from an assertion that childhood has boundaries far more elastic than can be held by the familiar notion of the innocent child developing toward a heteronormative future the title pays homage to the work of sociologist diana gittins who over twenty years ago asked how the shifting meanings of children and childhood impact the lives of children the contributions of this book examine contemporary educational policy and practice curriculum material literary and visual representations and teacher narratives to further probe how and why it matters that childhood as a concept and experience remains as multiple and elusive as ever the chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of the journal curriculum inquiry notion that every child brings a new beginning into the world they address the question of how educators can be more responsive to the otherness that childhood offers while assuming that most educational models follow either a chronological model of child development or view children as human beings that are lacking the contributors explore childhood as a philosophical concept in children adults and even beyond human beings childhood as a forgotten dimension of the world contributors also argue that a pedagogy that does not aim for an exodus of childhood but rather responds to the arrival of a new human being responsibly dialogically fosters a deeper appreciation of the newness that children bring in order to sensitize us for our own childhood as adults as well and allow us to welcome other forms of childhood in the world as a whole this book argues that the experience of natality such as the beginning of life is not chronologically determined but rather can occur more than once in a human life and beyond scholars of philosophy education psychology and childhood studies will find this book particularly useful
