the impression is not uncommon among readers that however interesting they may be the legendary stories which we no longer accept as true literally and which often we know to be absurd and impossible are entirely distinct from what we designate as history this view of them is not at all satisfactory to the careful student these tales as they have come down to us often have been rewritten and readapted to the beliefs and conditions of the various peoples of whose life and literature they have formed a part we reject them as chronicles of actual events but accept them as of great historical value in assisting us to determine the intellectual characteristics social conditions and moral standards at a time when a less skeptical or differently educated people confided in them believing then that all legends fables and myths contain some germs of truth and are invaluable sources of information to us the author has made free use of them in these pages indeed from them alone sometimes can be gained correct ideas of the true meaning and significance of rites and customs which still in modified survivals form an interesting and important part of our daily lives
