Social Support Measurement and Intervention 2000-10-19 surgery and pharmaceuticals are not the only effective procedures we have to improve our health the natural human tendency to care for fellow humans to support them with social networks has proven to be a powerful treatment as well as a result the areas of application for social support intervention have expanded dramatically during the past 20 years as these areas have expanded so too has the literature on the theory and measurement of social support yet the literature has focussed on very particular areas investigators in the social sciences have mainly focused on the protection that social support confers in the context of stressful life events and transitions whereas studies in the health sciences have concentrated on the effects of social networks and supports on population mortality and morbidity although no single theoretical framework has been widely accepted there is consensus that both the psychological sense of support and actual expressions of support play critical roles in maintaining health and well being this book is a state of the art resource for the selection and development of strategies for social support assessment and intervention designed for use by behavioral and medical scientists conducting studies of physical illness psychological adjustment and psychiatric illness in human populations this volume presents a broad conceptual framework addressing the role of social support in mental and physical health the book is divided into four sections the first provides some historical context as well as a conceptual overview of how social support might influence mental and physical health the second discusses techniques for measuring social networks and support and the third addresses the design of different types of support interventions the final section presents some general comments on the volume and its implications for social support research and intervention this resource is meant to aid researchers in understanding the conceptual criteria on which measurement and intervention decisions should be made when studying the relations between social support and health furthermore the information provided on both measurement and intervention will be valuable to practitioners interested in designing and evaluating prevention and treatment initiatives sponsored by the fetzer institute as a follow up to their successful 1995 publication measuring stress this book will provide the most up to date research on the effects of social support interventions on physical and mental health Erhaltener Social Support im Alter 1996 no one is rich enough to do without a neighbor traditional danish proverb this bit of danish folk wisdom expresses an idea underlying much of the current thinking about social support while the clinical literature has for a long time recognized the deleterious effects of unwholesome social relationships only more recently has the focus broadened to include the positive side of social interaction those interpersonal ties that are desired rewarding and protective this book contains theoretical and research contributions by a group of scholars who are charting this side of the social spectrum evidence is increasing that maladaptive ways of thinking and behaving occur disproportionately among people with few social supports rather than sapping self reliance strong ties with others particularly family members seem to encourage it reliance on others and self reliance are not only compatible but complementary to one another while the mechanism by which an intimate relationship is protective has yet to be worked out the following factors seem to be involved intimacy social integration through shared concerns reassurance of worth the opportunity to be nurtured by others a sense of reliable alliance and guidance the major advance that is taking place in the literature on social support is that reliance is being placed less on anecdotal and clinical evidence and more on empirical inquiry the chapters of this book reflect this important development and identify the frontiers that are currently being explored

Social Support: Theory, Research and Applications 2011-10-19 while insights sometimes are slow in coming they often seem obvious when they finally arrive this handbook is an outcome of the insight that the topics of social support and the family are very closely linked obvious as this might seem the fact remains that the literatures dealing with social support and the family have been deceptively separate and distinct for example work on social support began in the 1970s with the accumulation of evidence that social ties and social integration play important roles in health and personal adjustment even though family members are often the key social supporters of individuals relatively little research of social support was targeted on family interactions as a path to specifying supporter processes it is now recognized that one of the most important features of the family is its role in providing the individual with a source of support and acceptance fortunately in recent years the distinctness and separateness of the fields of social support and the family have blurred this handbook provides the first collation and integration of social support and family research this integration calls for specifying processes such as the cognitions associated with poor support availability and unrewarding family constellations and factors such as cultural differences in family life and support provision that are pertinent to integration

Stress And Emotion 2013-09-05 the purpose of this study is to examine the impact of parental financial support and emotional support on college social work students well being exploring how different levels of parental financial and emotional support effect a student s depression stress negative emotion and positive emotion specifically between high and low income level students this was conducted through a exploratory non experimental study an anonymous self reported questionnaire was used to conduct non random single time observation from a convenience sample of undergraduate and graduate social work students from san diego state university one hundred and forty six students participated in the present study due to various participants having missing data especially in the family income measurement only ninety seven participant s data were analyzed the majority of the results in this study did not support the hypotheses however this study s results did indicate that the more financial support and parental social support students received from their parents the more positive emotion they experienced it was also found the more parent social support a student with lower income desired the higher the student's level of stress and depression also higher levels of desire for parental social support was less influential on their depression and stress level for students of higher family income than among lower family income level students contrary to the researcher's expectation it was found that the larger the gap between parent social support experience and parent social support desired was associated with higher positive emotion among students in conclusion since the study found a relationship between parental financial support and parental social support experience and positive emotion it may be important to conduct further research in this area in order to establish more effective outreach programs for students and their families this is especially important due to the stressful economic situation and the current increase in college tuition as well as the negative impact of stress and depression on a student's academic achievement and retention within college programs these outreach programs within universities could help educate and support families and students in different ways to help students increase their well being and be successful during college

Support of Social Science in Canada 1970 this research investigated the relationship of self concept social support and life events with stress one hundred eighty six volunteers 110 women and 76 men completed the tennessee self concept scale the inventory of socially supportive behaviors the social readjustment rating scale and the scl 90 r regression analyses revealed that self concept contributed the greatest amount of variance to stress scores followed by life events and then social support all were statistically significant and contributed a total of 35 of the variance in stress scores analyses of variance found no interaction among variables at low levels of life events at both high and low levels of life events neither self concept nor social support alone combined with life events to form a statistically significant interaction at the level of high life events a statistically significant interaction of gender social support life events and self concept was found further analysis resulted in a statistically significant interaction of social support and self concept with women experiencing high life events main effects for social support were not found evidence for the buffering hypothesis of social support at high levels of life events was found the major conclusions of the researcher were strong self concept plays a more important part in the low stress levels than either life events or social support evidence for the buffering effect of social support was seen at high levels of life events social support buffered the effects of life events among women with low self concept
