this book breaks new ground in scholarship on the politics of migration the edited volume brings together in depth case studies from argentina tunisia japan south korea the united states australia the philippines china and saudi arabia to showcase the complex interplay between migration politics and broader dynamics of regime change state formation and nation state ideology challenging conventional wisdom we reveal that political systems whether liberal or illiberal democratic or authoritarian do not rigidly dictate migration politics instead migration politics and political regimes co produce one another our exploration delves into the roles of civil society legal actors employers and international norms across diverse political contexts and bridges conversations around immigration and emigration politics uncovering unexpected similarities in migration policies across different political regimes at a time when states are increasingly adopting illiberal practices this collection is essential for political scientists sociologists and migration scholars seeking a fresh perspective migration politics across the world offers an ideal vantage point for understanding the role of migration in state transformations and political changes around the world the chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of third world quarterly one more collection of soviet sf stories now lies in your hands seven stories by ten authors like ten people talking around one table collections of stories by different writers always resemble round table conferences all the more so is this true of science fiction as a genre that bubbles with polemic zest indeed i would compare this more to a students debating society in some smoke filled room in whose blue haze the flushed faces and flashing eyes can barely be distinguished here one declaims with inspired ardour another grins wryly as he intersperses some snide remark a third thumps the table his voice hoarse with passion students indeed most young folk for that matter adore to talk of love and learning of life and its meaning of virtuous and wicked ways of the problems that face man today and tomorrow and of how all this is expressed by writer and artist science fiction in effect does the same with perhaps as is only natural a somewhat greater emphasis on the problems of tomorrow and of how best to convey their substance soviet sf lies well within the mainstream of soviet writing generally and is as diverse in theme and imagery in the fifty odd years of its existence its course has been a chequered one veering with all the turns in the tide of soviet history particularly during the times of the first five year plan and world war two but more so when sputnik shot up to furrow the unexplored outer fields of space and the now famous dispute between poet and physicist began some twenty seven years ago boris slusky a rather well known soviet poet who is no writer of sf mind you produced the following quatrain which is often quoted in this country it is the poet versus physicist one is out the other in today perhaps a general law is this and no accidental step astray soviet science fiction also has its physicists and its poets the physicists believe in the omnipotence of the exact sciences in mathematics and the machine they claim that every single problem can be pinned down to the drawing board and can be solved in laboratory retorts that everything can be done by computer and robot the poets are sceptical not for them are the formulas of the physicists but rather the feelings and promptings of the heart true enough the machine can make life easier but they say it can also become an onerous oppressive burden this book as you will have probably noticed is entitled journey across three worlds it is called thus after the novelet presented herein by the abramovs father and son no generational animosity here as you see quite the contrary one is seventy odd years old the other only thirty one is a professional writer with numerous novels stories and essays to his credit the other is an engineer of the breed inspired by sputnik and for whom all of soviet sf that came before serves as but the launching pad for blasting off into the incredible unknown and indeed everything that comes from under their pen pens is steeped in the latest and most unbelievable of hypotheses in the wildest of fantasies and conjectures this time it is parallel worlds but elsewhere it may be extragalactic visitors invested with an aura of unfathomable power or the duplication not just of things and inanimate objects but also of people whole cities countries an even whole epochs what is sometimes known as the split image theme how can parents educators business leaders and policy makers nurture creativity prepare for inventiveness and stimulate innovation one compelling answer this book argues lies in fostering the invention of imaginary worlds a k a worldplay first emerging in middle childhood this complex form of make believe draws lifelong energy from the fruitful combustions of play imagination and creativity unfortunately trends in modern life conspire to break down the synergies of creative play with imaginary worlds unstructured playtime in childhood has all but disappeared invent it yourself make believe places have all but succumbed in adolescence to ready made computer games adults are discouraged from playing as a waste of time with no relevance to the workplace narrow notions of creativity exile the fictive imagination to fantasy arts and yet as michele root bernstein demonstrates by means of historical inquiry quantitative study and contemporary interview spontaneous worldplay in childhood develops creative potential and strategic worldplay in adulthood inspires innovations in the sciences and social
