in 2009 the association for the advancement of teaching and research in intellectual property atrip dedicated its yearly congress to the theme horizontal issues in ip law uncovering the matrix that theme and the main concern of the so called intellectual property of transition project have been brought together by the editors of the current book under the intriguing title the structure of intellectual property law questioned is whether the apparent compartmentalisation and fragmentation of actual intellectual property law can be based upon a coherent system that supports the entire field in other words it is questioned whether one organising principle which underlies the different parts of this domain of law can be found not surprisingly the answers given by the various experts that contribute to this book tend to differ mainly depending on their field of interest copyright law patent law trademark law the main tendency being in favour of tailoring instead of unifying both from the perspective of efficiency and that of economics however even more interesting than the answers to the question posed are the stimulating and thought provoking analyses which the book offers this is really a book one should read if one is interested in the conjunction of the basic principles of intellectual property law and how they work out in practice willem grosheide utrecht university the netherlands today intellectual property is a broad genus embracing various more specific species invention patents copyright trade marks and so forth anyone concerned with how this ever expanding grouping is developing should read the fourteen essays in this book written by leading scholars they tackle not only the relationships between the species but also those between sub species originally presented as papers to the association for teaching and research in ip the writing is both subtle and full of verve strongly recommended william cornish cambridge university uk this well researched and highly topical book analyses whether the ever increasing degree of sophistication in intellectual property law necessarily leads to fragmentation and inconsistency or whether the common principles informing the system are sustainable enough to offer a solid and resilient framework for legal development

eu directive 2004 48 ec obliges member states to seek to achieve partial harmonization of the remedies procedures and measures necessary to enforce intellectual property law these obligations provide what may be termed a minimum standard which must be fulfilled by the member states in the course of their implementation of the directive however the directive is not faring well at the member state level the three authors vastly detailed article by article analysis of the fortunes of directive 2004 48 ec in three eu jurisdictions offers enormously valuable insights into the complex ways member states respond to community law and in so doing provides an important addition to the ongoing inquiry into the nature of the reciprocal tensions between eu law both judicial and legislative and the laws of member states the particular investigation undertaken here reveals three paradigmatic situations the situation in which the directive has not been implemented at all either because the member state believes that its current legislation is adequate or that the wording of the directive is such that no special legislation is required england the situation in which implementation has been inadequate because either the pre existing legislation constitutes inadequate legislation or because the specifically adopted legislation proves to be legally uncertain the netherlands and the situation in which the relevant time for implementation for the directive has elapsed and no specific legislation has been adopted germany if there really is as the european commission contends an enforcement deficit in the protection of intellectual property rights by national rules of procedure then the most effective remedial approach cummings shows is through the principles of legal certainty full effect and effective judicial protection these principles will assist the national court in interpretation of the precise meaning of the substantive obligations under the directive drawing on the tenor of ecj law that national procedural rules should not present an obstacle to adequate judicial protection the author considers the conditions that must be fulfilled before an eventual claimant who has suffered loss and damage caused by either the non implementation or the incorrect implementation of a directive may bring an action against the state for breach of community law the author presents his analyses of the implementation of the directive in dutch and english national procedure and his proposals for german implementation as three separate cases rather than comparatively as any attempt to compare either the method of national implementation or the degree of adequacy or inadequacy inevitably obscures the essential particularities of each of the three national systems in relation to the directive although this book will repay the study of anyone interested in european law it will be of special value to practitioners and policymakers engaged in intellectual property law particularly in eu member states
